THE MONTELLO HILLSIDE

ON A WEEKEND OF 'ETIQUETTE' IN TREVISO

€URO 115.00 PER PERSON FOR TWO NIGHTS
VALID 2010

BACKGROUND

A very singular "monticellus" with its strong fragrance of herbs and wild plants was once used by the Serenissima Republic of Venice as a forest reserve that provided excellent wood for the venetian ships. This mountain was unfortunately also the final 'Theatre' of World War I, and today it still preserves many important testimony monuments and relics. The Montello is an invitation to discover the signs of this important part of our history in a relaxing and contemplative atmosphere, whilst enjoying excellent food of local traditions. Giavera del Montello is worth a visit, here you will find the suggestive British Cemetery and the Giavera Memorial dedicated to the 'unknown' soldiers.

Nervesa della Battaglia houses the imposing Montello Military Shrine. In Nervesa you can also visit the Great War Museum which displays many important historical finds: The barcone del Genio Pontieri, monument to the famous pilot Francesco Baracca; and the remains of the Abbey of San Eustachio, where the priest Monsignor Della Casa composed his famous Galateo, a "compendium on etiquette and good manners". Roaming around the Montello mountain you can visit Santi Angeli, with its most picturesque views overlooking the Piave River, considered a 'sacred' river for the Italians. In the area there are many Villas and cultural sites to discover, and excellent food distinguished by a variety of wild greens including hops, dandelion and wild nettles which grow spontaneously in the woods and fields giving color and unique flavors to the dishes.
